5 BUNDISTS FACE LOSS OF CITIZENSHIP

Private Roy Schlote, a young American soldier born in Utah and trained in Germany as a "youth missionary," questioned by Assistant United States Attorney Frank J. Parker, testified that he was picked for the work while visiting Germany in 1938, and trained there in preparation for his return to the United States.

In a youth camp near Berlin, he said, he studied military science for six weeks, and learned the principles of national socialism, particularly the art of instilling Nazi ideals in the heads of his young contemporaries in America.

He testified that in this country, he testified, he went on a lecture tour which took him around a circuit of youth movement groups until early in 1940, when he said, he "saw the error of his ways."

Schlote then turned his back on his German education, he said, withdrew from the youth movement and was inducted into the Army early in the war.

Hotbed of Bund
Long Island was a hotbed of the Bund, with its satellite "youth movement" flourished here like a barnyard weed. Schlote was well-known in Bund circles at Ridgewood, Astoria, Jamaica and in the Nassau-Suffolk area.

Another government witness is Victor F. Ridder, publisher of the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung, German language daily.

He testified that as early as 1933, the Nazis tried to "muscle in" and dictate his editorial policies.

Ridder said he told the Hitler emissaries that "they were trying to get away with something that even the Congress of the United States could not do, dictate to the free press," and he ordered them out of the office.

RAIL CENTER CAPTURED BY RED TROOPS

town of 16,300 persons, would knock out the anchor of a German salient extending into the Soviet flank, while the loss of Proskurov would force the enemy to fall back across the Dniester into Rumania for communication with 500,000 Nazi troops isolated in the lower Dnieper bend.

Front reports said Zhukov was approaching the second and final objective of his offensive, the complete rupture of the German southern front and the splitting of the German armies in the western and southern Ukraine. The first objective was accomplished with the severing of the double trunk railway between Odessa and Uarsaw.

Last Link Menaced
The Russians reached to within seven miles northwest of Proskurov, next key junction on the Odessa-Warsaw line, with the capture of Gruznavitsa, 55 miles north of Rumania, an 18-mile advance along the north bank of the upper Bug River. Capture of Proskurov would cut a single railway line that loops below the severed portion of the Odessa-Warsaw line and is the last link north of Rumania between the southern and western Ukraine.

Zhukov's forces broke into the outskirts of Staro-Konstantinov, 24 miles northeast of Proskurov, yesterday after capturing towns two miles east, four northwest and seven southeast. Up to 3,000 German soldiers killed and 25 tanks and self-propelled guns destroyed in what the Soviet high command called "especially fierce fighting."

The east wing of the 1st Ukrainian Army increased the threat to Zhukov's forces, another junction of the Odessa-Warsaw trunk line, with the seizure of Volosovits, 41 miles to the north and 17 miles northeast of Proskurov.

In one sector, the Germans counter-attacked with 100 tanks, but fell back to their initial positions after losing 42 of them.

Altogether, the 1st Ukrainian Army captured 100 towns and villages yesterday for a five-day total of more than 1,000.

In northern Estonia, the Germans retreated in disorder after losing 900 men and three tanks in a futile attempt to smash back Soviet planes added to the toll of men and machines with a series of heavy raids. Eleven German planes were shot down and 32 destroyed on the ground.

ANZO YANKS HOLD FIRMLY ON BEACHHEAD

hand battles had been in progress Monday and Tuesday night. Canadian combat patrols on the Eighth Army's Adriatic front engaged Nazi skirmishers in the Tollo sector three miles northwest of Ortona and Polish artillery shelled enemy units around Aleteta.

Poor visibility over most of Italy grounded the U. S. 15th Air Force's heavy bombers, but hard-hitting American Marauders and Mitchells picked up the attack with a series of smashing raids on Nazi supply routes in the suburbs of Rome to San Stefano harbor, 80 miles northwest of the Italian capital.

Headquarters spokesmen said poor visibility had prevented full observation of the damage inflicted on the Tiburtina yards yesterday, but they reported that the recent series of raids on the network of railway yards in the Rome area had "severely damaged" those vital clearing points for German troops and supplies moving southward to the fighting fronts.

Marauder crews who participated in Tuesday's raid on the Ostiense yards in the southern outskirts of Rome said the entire target area was littered with smashed freight cars and burning tanks and trucks. Some 250 cars were believed to have been destroyed or damaged heavily last Friday when the Marauders caught 1,000 cars jammed in the yards.

German warplanes struck back at the Allied beachhead lines Tuesday night, spraying anti-aircraft personnel in the southern outskirts of Rome said the entire target area was littered with smashed freight cars and burning tanks and trucks. Some 250 cars were believed to have been destroyed or damaged heavily last Friday when the Marauders caught 1,000 cars jammed in the yards.

Another small formation of German planes lashed out across the Mediterranean at dusk yesterday to avenge the first air raid since last August. The raid lasted only about 10 minutes, however, and there were no major damage or casualties.

The Luftwaffe's biggest effort was hurled against an Allied convoy moving along the North African coast at about the same time as the German planes struck at the Mediterranean. Between 50 and 60 German planes straggled off the convoy, but they were driven off before causing any damage.

Did FCC cause Pearl Harbor?

WASHINGTON (UP)—Congressional opponents of the Federal Communications Commission said today they still are not satisfied that the FCC was not at least partially responsible for the Pearl Harbor disaster despite denials by FCC Chairman James L. Fly.
